Voting Together: Intergenerational Politics and Civic Engagement Among Hmong Americans

Come hear Dr. Carolyn Wong, Research Associate, Asian American Studies Institute at UMass-Boston, speak about her book and research!

Tuesday, October 25th 2016
7-8:30 pm, Start House

Hmong American immigrants first came to the United States as refugees of the Vietnam War, and have since made a notable impact and advancements in American political life. Yet the average level of education among Hmong Americans still lags behind that of the general U.S. population and high rates of poverty persist in their community, highlighting a curious disparity across the typical benchmarks of immigrant incorporation.

Sponsored by Asian American Center, Asian American Studies Program, History Department, Political Science Department, and Tisch College

Questions? Email asianamcenter@tufts.edu