In this course we will examine some of the central thinkers and concepts of modern political thought, including the rejection of ancient political philosophy and Christianity and the rise of liberalism (Hobbes and Locke); the critique of the liberal outlook in the name of nature and virtue (Rousseau), tradition and custom (Burke), equality and liberation (Marx), and creativity and greatness (Nietzsche); and the attempt to rescue or recover liberal modernity in the face of some of these worries (Smith and Mill). In addition to exploring the various conceptions of nature, human nature, justice, freedom, history, and the good life found in the works of these thinkers, we will also use their arguments to reflect on the health or illness of liberal democracy in today’s world.

Course Format and Requirements:

By far the most important requirement of the course is that you complete all assigned readings carefully and before class. My recommendation is to go over the readings relatively quickly once, to see what topics are covered and to pick out the main ideas, and then do them again, slowly and carefully, taking notes about what seems important or intriguing and about what you don’t fully understand. To facilitate reading, I will hand out a list of study questions on each text; these questions can be used to guide your reading but are not exhaustive.

The class will be conducted in lecture-discussion format. That is, every class session will involve some lecturing but also some discussion and time for questions. In order to participate in these discussions and ask useful questions, you will need to grapple with the central ideas and arguments of the readings ahead of time. You should always bring the relevant text to class.

The use of laptops/tablets in class is permitted but discouraged. If you do use one, you may not use it for any purpose other than to look at the readings (when they are on Trunk) and to take notes: absolutely no email, Facebook, ESPN, etc. These non-class-related activities are disrespectful to me and your classmates and distracting for those sitting near you. I recommend disconnecting your computer from the internet during class to help avoid the temptation. You may not use your phone for any purpose during class time; if an emergency arises and you need to do so, please step out of the room first. If I see you using your computer for a non-class-related activity or your phone for any reason, I will lower your participation grade by 10 percentage points (each time).

Grades will be determined by a take-home midterm exam (due March 10), an in-class midterm exam (on April 5), and a take-home final exam (due May 8), as well as class participation. The take-home exams will be essay style, and the in-class exam will consist of short answer and passage identification questions.

Class participation credit can be earned in three ways:
1) Attendance. Attendance at the lectures is mandatory, and I will periodically take attendance to enforce this. Students arriving after attendance has been taken will be counted as absent.
2) Contribution to class discussions. Those who ask or answer questions in class will be rewarded for doing so.
3) Attendance and participation in discussion sessions. In addition to the lectures, Will will hold six discussion/review sessions; see the schedule below. Participation in these sessions is voluntary but very highly encouraged.

Exams will be given a numerical grade on the following scale:

\begin{array}{c|ccc}
\text{Grade} & \text{A} & \text{B} & \text{C} \\
\text{Range} & 93-100 & 83-82 & 73-72 \\
\text{Grade} & \text{A-} & \text{B+} & \text{C-} \\
\text{Range} & 90-92 & 87-89 & 70-72 \\
\text{Grade} & \text{B-} & \text{B} & \text{F} \\
\text{Range} & 80-82 & 83-86 & 59 \text{ and below} \\
\end{array}

Grades will be determined as follows:

- Midterm exams: 30% each
- Final exam: 35%
- Class participation: 5%
