In this reading lab, we examine issues of equity, power, and knowledge production in STEM. Specifically, we will explore intersections of race, gender, culture, and class using critical lenses to consider how knowledge is produced and what practices are recognized and valued. We will read papers that challenge our understandings of teaching and learning these subjects in schools, with goals of working toward more equitable engagement in STEM.