MINOR IN URBAN STUDIES

The Minor in Urban Studies provides students with an opportunity to pursue their love of cities and communities and to study urban issues in depth. Students can select from a rich variety of courses that examine the interplay among the different groups occupying the urban space, the problems they confront, their struggle for recognition and power, and the forces shaping the physical terrain they inhabit. Students can pursue interests in urban history, urban design, neighborhood revitalization, economic development, social movements, and world urbanization.

The Minor offers a good foundation for students contemplating graduate work in urban planning, environmental policy, public administration, public policy, law, or social work. It also can be an intellectually exciting focus for interdisciplinary exploration, because understanding urban phenomena requires synthesizing knowledge from a broad range of the social sciences and humanities.

Students pursuing the Urban Studies Minor will have the opportunity to participate in events sponsored by the graduate Department of Urban and Environmental Policy and Planning (UEP). Students will be invited to guest lectures, faculty and student presentations, and films.

UEP

The Department of Urban and Environmental Policy and Planning is a graduate public policy and planning program that offers an accredited, two-year master of arts degree and a one-year masters of public policy degree for professionals with substantial work experience. It prepares public-spirited individuals for challenging careers in government, nonprofit organizations, citizen advocacy groups, and the private sector.

UEP is located at 97 Talbot Avenue on the Medford Campus. The faculty coordinator for the Urban Studies Minor is Ann Rappaport (ext. 72269).

Requirements of the Minor

The Urban Studies Minor reflects the truly interdisciplinary nature of the study of urban people and places. Students select courses from a number of departments, including Anthropology, Art History, Child Development, Community Health, Economics, Education, History, Sociology, Political Science, and UEP. The Minor requires the completion of five courses from at least three different departments. The courses are drawn from the list presented.

A course taken as a part of a minor program must be taken for a letter grade and may not be used toward the fulfillment of the foundation requirements. A maximum of two credits from a minor may be counted toward a major or majors; up to two credits may be used for distribution requirements.

The completion of an Urban Studies Minor capstone project is optional. The project will integrate the knowledge and methods of the relevant disciplines. Depending on the topic, the project can be a research paper, an oral presentation, a video, a photographic exhibit, a fictional narrative, or other forms of study.

The topic of the project must receive initial approval from an instructor of one of the courses taken by the student for the Urban Studies Minor program. This instructor also will agree to direct the student’s work on the project. The project will be evaluated by at least one other faculty member, who will consult with the project director regarding the grade to be assigned. The student is responsible for selecting these faculty members, who then become the capstone project committee. The project will be given one-half or one course credit under a UEP195 designation and will receive a letter grade.

A student will seek initial approval to pursue the Minor from the Urban Studies Minor coordinator in UEP. At the beginning of the student’s senior year, the student will consult with the Urban Studies Minor coordinator about the capstone project committee. The committee will consist of two faculty members, one of whom will serve as the project director.

Later when they complete the major checklist, students must also submit an Urban Studies Minor Certification Form (available on the UEP website) to the UEP office to obtain the signature of the faculty coordinator of the minor. The UEP office will forward the signed form to Student Services.
