Building a Wall or Digging a Hole?
Donald Trump and the Latinx Electorate
Tony Affigne
(Political Science, Providence College)

Ignoring conventional wisdom about the importance of the Hispanic electorate, presidential candidate Donald Trump made extreme nationalism and xenophobia centerpieces of his 2016 campaign. In this wide-ranging lecture, award-winning political scientist Dr. Tony Affigne asks whether Trump’s historically high negative ratings among Latino/a voters signals a generational realignment in partisan demographics—or a temporary setback for GOP outreach plans. Whether Trump wins or loses, has he forever changed the political terrain in America?

Providence College professor Tony Affigne is a nationally-recognized expert on Latino and Black politics, and in 1982 was Rhode Island’s first-ever Latino candidate for elective office. He was lead editor for Latino Politics en Ciencia Política: The Search for Latino Identity and Racial Consciousness (NYU Press, 2014), and is book review editor for the Journal of Race, Ethnicity, and Politics (Cambridge).

Wednesday, Nov. 2, 7:00-8:30pm, Barnum 008

Refreshments Provided