Political Science Fall 2020 Courses

(M) – Methodology

(*) – Advanced Seminar

PS-004: First-Year Tutorial in Politics: Shakespeare's Politics
Vickie Sullivan
Shakespeare’s plays provide profound insights into the human psyche. They also present a remarkably varied political landscape, offering depictions of ancient and modern, pagan and Christian, republican and monarchical, martial and commercial regimes. This advising seminar will study Coriolanus, Julius Caesar, Antony and Cleopatra, Macbeth, Henry V, and Hamlet in order to consider a central question of political theory—the effect that politics and religion have on the human personality and human possibilities.
First Year Students Advising Seminar

PS-011: Introduction to American Politics
James Glaser
A study of governmental politics, functions, and programs. Emphasis given to political behavior, both at the mass level and in institutions. Survey of public opinion and political culture, parties, and elections. Congress, the presidency, the bureaucracy, the federal courts, and interest groups.

PS-015: Sophomore Seminar: Politics & City (M)
Jeffrey Berry
Three major problems in urban politics: the political economy of cities, especially issues involving community economic development; race and the city, emphasizing the problems facing the poorest residents of the inner city; and political empowerment, including analysis of neighborhood government.

PS-021: Introduction to Comparative Politics
Nimah Mazaheri
Theories and evidence in comparative politics, preparing students for upper-level courses that focus on specific regions, countries, and themes. The rise and fall of democracy in selected countries from different regions such as Western Europe, Eastern Europe and Russia, East Asia, South Asia, Africa, the Middle East, and Latin America.

PS-041: Western Political Thought I
Ioannis Evrigenis
Central concepts of ancient, medieval, and early modern political thought. Ideas of Thucydides, Aristophanes, Plato, and Aristotle during the rise and fall of Athens. Subsequent transformations of political philosophy related to the decline of the Roman Empire and the origins and development of Christian political doctrine, and the new political outlook of those who challenged the hegemony of Christianity. Analysis of how pre-modern political thought helped structure future political debate.

PS-061: Introduction to International Relations
Michael Beckley
Examination of several conceptual designs intended to make order out of the essential anarchy in international relations, from a theoretical assessment of the nation-state and the nature of national power to an exploration of behavior among nation-states, including the ultimate problem of war and peace and an appraisal of the factors that give an age its particular characteristics.

PS-099: Internship: Fieldwork in Politics
Shinju Fujihira
Internship placements with such employers as legislators, campaigns, news media, lobbies, law firms, and administrative agencies. Twelve to fifteen hours of work per week. Written assignments, with supporting readings, on organizational structure, goals and strategies, and occupational socialization.

PS-101: The Presidency & Executive Branch
Jeffrey Berry
Study of the constitutional development of the presidential office, its power, prestige, and functions, as well as the influences of the person occupying that office. Major emphasis is on the process of policy formulation in the executive branch. Analysis of the president's relations with his staff, the bureaucracy, the Congress, the press, and the public.
Prerequisite: Sophomore standing or permission of instructor.

PS-103: Political Science Research Methods (M)
Nimah Mazaheri
The study of quantitative methods for investigating political issues and policy controversies. Focuses on collecting, analyzing, and presenting data. Emphasizes hands-on training that provides useful skills for academic and professional settings. Topics covered include: measurement, hypothesis development, survey design, experiments, content analysis, significance tests, correlation, and regression. No prior statistics background necessary. A methodologically focused course.
Prerequisites: Completion of any Political Science Foundation Course: PS 11, 21, 41, 42, or 61 or Political Science first year tutorials: PS 2, 3 or 4.

PS-105: Constitutional Law
Hon. Judge Dennis Curran (Ret.)
The development and application of American constitutional law as interpreted in the leading decisions of the Supreme Court. Included are citizenship, the commerce power, due process of law, and the equal protection of the laws. Recent trends in constitutional doctrine.

PS-111: Political Psychology (M)
Deborah Schildkraut
Political psychology is concerned with the role of human thought, emotion, and behavior in politics, and in the linkages between these elements. In this course, we will explore several key approaches to understanding the psychology of political behavior and will examine the psychological origins of citizens' political beliefs and actions from a variety of perspectives. Topics covered include: information processing, inter-group conflict, attribution, personality, stereotyping, and prejudice.
Recommendations: PS 11, 21, 41, 42, or 61.
PS-112: U.S. Elections: Rules, Strategies, and Outcomes
Eitan Hersh
This is a survey course of U.S. elections that connects the dots from laws (the Constitution, case law, state and federal statutes) to strategies (by political parties, candidates, interest groups, and donors), and from strategies to outcomes (voting, public opinion, activism). No pre-requisites. All are welcome.

PS-115: Information, Technology, and Political Power (M)
Eitan Hersh
A wide-ranging course in how politics affects information technologies and in how information affects politics and governance. Topics include oversight, government leaks, free speech, surveillance, collective action, voter decision-making, campaign targeting, Uber, Amazon and antitrust laws, and more.

PS-118-01: Topics in American Politics: The American Legal System
Hon. Judge Dennis Curran (Ret.)
The law governs and yet mystifies. This course offers a compelling, real-world approach to criminal law and procedure (including I.C.E. detainers), our court system, civil procedure, contracts (such as internet "click-wrap" agreements), employment law, negligence, product liability, the jury trial, as well as alternatives to litigation. We will study the law from a political science perspective, recognizing that law reflects public policy made by political institutions which strive valiantly (though sometimes unsuccessfully) to reflect social values. Although introductory in nature in its approach to the substantive law, the course will nevertheless address dramatic, cutting-edge legal issues. Our goal is to demystify the legal process by offering you an insider's view of how laws are made, applied, and administered with justice.

The course will be taught by Honorable Dennis J. Curran, Justice of the Massachusetts Superior Court (ret.), who has presided over 450 civil and criminal trials. Justice Curran has taught several ExCollege law-related courses, and taught law school courses and at the Summer@Brown program.

He had received four statewide judicial awards for the advancement of justice in Massachusetts.

PS-118-02: Topics in American Politics: Organizing for Social Change
Daniel LeBlanc & Kenneth Galdston
This course will trace community organizing to some of its early roots in the United States, as well as drawing connections between community organizing and other movements, including the labor, civil rights, and environmental movements. Presentations and discussions with other Boston area community organizers will be included as will be opportunities to visit with and observe local community-based organizations.

PS-119-01: Seminar In American Politics: Polling the 2020 Election (*)
Brian Schaffner
The class will focus on understanding and analyzing the 2020 U.S. elections through the perspective of political polling. Special attention will be paid to understanding what factors affect how people evaluate candidates, decide who to support, and turn out to vote. A main component of the course will be a class project to develop, conduct, and analyze a survey of voters during the 2020 elections. In the process of conducting this survey, students will gain valuable first-hand experience in learning how to write survey questions, how to properly sample and interview respondents, and how to analyze survey data. Students will also gain important skills in learning how to construct a research paper highlighting your findings, present your findings to an audience of your peers, and evaluate research presented by others. PS103 or an equivalent methods course is a pre-requisite and enrollment is by instructor permission.

Prerequisites: PS 103 and permission of instructor

PS-121-01: Seminar: Political Culture in Comparative Perspectives (*)
Consuelo Cruz
How cultural meanings and practices shape political struggles and institutions. Survey of culturalist theories of political dynamics and structures, and assessment of theories against a range of empirical case studies from Asia, the Middle East, Western Europe, Latin America, and the United States.

PS-126: Chinese Politics
Elizabeth Remick-Yamamoto
Survey of the domestic politics of the People's Republic of China. The development of Communist Party power through the political campaigns of the 1950s and 1960s. The political, cultural, economic, and social challenges faced by post-Mao reformers. Brief consideration of foreign policy. Recommendations: Sophomore standing or permission of instructor.

PS-127: Latin American Politics
Consuelo Cruz
This course is intended to deepen our understanding of Latin America and of politics. To that end, we will be concerned with both the political dynamics of Latin America and with significant debates in political science. This course will familiarize students with the rich histories of several Latin American countries and engage social scientific theorizing of such processes as imperialism, colonialism, revolution, regime change, identity politics, and issues in political economy.

PS-130: Seminar: African Political Economy (*)(M)
Pearl Robinson
Theories explaining the impact of political institutions on African economies. Questions include: Why has sustainable development been so elusive? What are the determinants of state-business relationships in economic policy-making in the neo-liberal era? How does the quality of governance affect issues of poverty and redistribution? Can gender-targeted strategies turn the tide of poor economic performance? We follow shifts in development thinking, the leverage of foreign interests, and the relationship between ideas and economic policy-making in Africa over the last half-century.

Prerequisites: Sophomore standing or permission of instructor.
PS-135: Comparative Revolutions (M)
Elizabeth. Remick-Yamamoto
The causes, processes, and outcomes of revolution. Student development of a theory of revolution's causes through comparative examination of revolutions in France, Russia, China, Iran, and one other case chosen by the class. Discussion of whether the causes of revolution have changed in the late twentieth century.
Prerequisite: Sophomore standing or permission of instructor.

PS-138-01: Topics In Comparative Politics: Democracy and its Alternatives
David Art
This course examines political regime types over the last two centuries. We will trace the development of democratic institutions and engage the classic question “what causes democracy?” But we will also consider non-democratic regime types (monarchic, totalitarian, authoritarian, competitive authoritarian) and analyze their origins and dynamics.
Recommendation: PS 21

PS-139-01: Seminar in Comparative Politics: German Politics from Bismarck to Merkel (*)
David Art
This senior seminar on modern German politics begins with Bismarck’s unification of Germany and his construction of a political system that lasted from 1870 until 1918. We then move to the rise and fall of the Weimar Republic, before turning to the rise of Nazism and the Holocaust. The second half of the course examines the postwar reconstruction of West Germany, the dynamics of the East German communist regime, and the unification of Germany. Contemporary topics include Germany’s emerging role as European hegemon, rising populism, and the integration of immigrant and refugee populations. Students will write a research paper as a component of this course.
Recommendation: PS 21

PS-147: Seminar: Political Philosophy of Nietzsche (*)
Robert Devigne
Nietzsche's views of philosophy, nature, morality, religion, art, science, and politics. Analysis of view that "God is dead" and that we are no longer capable of distinguishing whether one value is better than another. Assessment of the qualities that must exist--in both the individual and society--for human creativity to regenerate. Exploration of whether Nietzsche successfully broke from Western political philosophy. Please see departmental website for specific details.
Recommendations: Sophomore standing or permission of instructor and completion of PS 41 or 42.

PS-158-01: Topics In Political Thought: Rise and Decay of the West
Robert Devigne
Literature that examines whether the modern West will avoid the fate of all previous civilizations of world historical significance: decay and/or fall. Among the topics explored: the charge that the arts and sciences erode social cohesion; the argument that the Western technological mind promotes "enfeeblement of the spirit;" the idea that modernity marks the peak or "end of history;" the position that modern Western values necessarily lead to a nihilistic crisis of beliefs. Throughout the course, there will be comparisons between the modern West and Persia, Greece,
Rome, and Christendom and analysis of corruption as a source of individualism, cultural development, and philosophy. Readings include Rousseau, Hegel, Nietzsche, Tocqueville, Heidegger, Strauss, Schmitt.

PS-180: Regionalism in Africa
Pearl Robinson
The intersection of domestic politics and international relations in Africa: examination of regional economic communities, regionally based solutions to problem-solving and new regionalism in the post Cold War era. Particular attention given to state-building and national sovereignty as they impinge on regional projects. Theories of the state, regional integration theory, international regime theory, and constructivist international relations theory frame five themes: the construction of regional norms, transnational civil society, peace and security, trade and economic development, and the African human rights system.
Recommendations: Sophomore standing or permission of instructor.

PS-181: Public Opinion in Foreign Policy (M)
Richard Eichenberg
Study of the domestic politics of foreign policy, especially the relationship between leaders and people, which is central to democratic theory and practice. Examination of public and elite opinions on international issues: nuclear weapons, arms control, military intervention, and defense spending; historical and comparative focus. Inquiry into the determinants of attitudes, the impact of public opinion, the role of the media, and the effects of foreign policy events on domestic politics.
Recommendations: PS 61.

PS-185: Seminar: Nuclear Weapons and International Politics (*)
Jeffrey Taliaferro
Examination of the causes and consequences of nuclear weapons proliferation for international politics since 1945. Topics include the dynamics of nuclear proliferation; nonproliferation and counterproliferations strategies; nuclear strategy and deterrence; the demise of the JCOPA and Iran’s nuclear latency; the US-North Korea nuclear negotiations; the future of US-Russian-Chinese strategic arms control; and cyber threats to nuclear arsenals.
Pre-requisite: PS 61: Introduction to International Relations and junior or senior standing.

PS-187: Intelligence and National Security
Jeffrey Taliaferro
This course examines the role of intelligence in United States national security. It provides an overview of conceptual foundations of intelligence studies and traditional dimensions of intelligence activity (clandestine collection, analysis, counterintelligence, and covert action); debates about role of secrecy and intelligence agencies in a liberal democracy; and a discussion of intelligence in counterterrorism, weapons of mass destruction (WMD) nonproliferation, and cyber-warfare.
Prerequisites: PS 61 and sophomore standing.

PS-189-01: Seminar in International Relations: International Relations of East Asia (*)
Shinju Fujihira
This seminar examines the contemporary controversies in the field of international relations, in light of the empirical evidence drawn from the Asia-Pacific region. Topics include power and deterrence, alliance politics, economic regionalism and rivalry, domestic politics and nationalism, multilateral institutions, nuclear proliferation, terrorism and Islamist militancy, territorial and maritime disputes, and energy and environment.

Prerequisite: PS 61

PS-189-02: Seminar in International Relations: American Primacy (*)
Michael Beckley
The United States is the world's only superpower. Will this period of American primacy last? This course reviews the major threats to American power and evaluates how the United States can overcome them.

PS-198: Senior Honors Thesis (*) (M)
Richard Eichenberg
This course explores the theoretical, empirical, normative, and methodological problems involved in conducting political science research. It will also provide a forum for discussing students' draft thesis chapters.
