Brazilian Soap Operas: The Role of Oral Culture in a Modern Society.

In their heyday, one could listen to Brazilian soap operas just by walking down the streets, as TV sets were tuned to the same omnipresent channel. What led to the success of the medium and the genre? How was it experienced in the 1970s and 1980s, under dictatorship and then democratic opening? And what does it say about Brazilian present challenges regarding new media uses and democratic life? In this presentation, we will look at two iconic soap operas, the 1975 “O Grito”, set in fast-growing São Paulo, and the 1986 [censored in 1975] “Roque Santeiro”, set in the fictional Northeastern city of Asa Branca. We will bring the larger Brazilian media context regarding literacy and orality to shed light on this fascinating cultural phenomenon.

Heloisa Pait

Heloisa Pait, a Fulbright Alumna, teaches at the São Paulo State University Julio de Mesquita Filho and investigates the role of means of communication in democratic life. Her chapter ‘Media Epiphanies: Selfies and silences in São Paulo street protests’ received the Outstanding Author Contribution in the 2018 Emerald Literati Awards. Her latest papers are ‘Liberalism Without a Press: 18th Century Minas Gerais and the Roots of Brazilian Development’ and ‘Marielle, Presente! Political mourning and the quest for a liberal democracy in Brazil’. She writes extensively for the general public on media, culture and politics; she also writes fiction.

February 21, 2019 | 12PM
Olin Center | Laminan Lounge
Lunch will be served

Sponsored by the Latin American Studies Program, Department of Romance Studies, and the Charles Smith Fund.