Course overview
This course introduces students to the history and theory of cities and metropolitan regions focusing specifically on the actions of planners and policy-makers and how these actions shape our communities, neighborhoods, cities, regions, and world. The focus will be on the US, but the course will include comparisons to other nations and recognition that global cities and globalization are increasingly exerting their influence on US urban planning. Race, class, gender, immigration, difference and increasing interculturalism will serve as cross-cutting themes throughout the readings, lectures, and discussions. Particular attention will be paid to institutional actors and their responses – governments, business leaders, and community leaders.

Required Text: Rutherford H. Platt. 2014. Reclaiming American Cities: The Struggle for People, Place and Nature since 1900. Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press. (Note: the book is on sale at Tufts Bookstore, a copy is on reserve at Tisch Library, and it can be accessed as an E-text online through Tisch Library).

Course Objectives
This course has both knowledge and skills components. These knowledge and skills are important for professional practice in which planners and policy makers must understand the historical and spatial context for proposed plans and decisions, be able to clearly and concisely talk about these, and to quickly come up to speed on community issues, concerns, and past activities. In addition, to be a conscientious and visionary practitioner, professionals should strive to have a deep and comprehensive historical understanding of communities and issues.

UEP faculty have defined a range of competencies that we aim to have all our students obtain during their time in UEP. In addition, the Planning Accreditation Boards has also defined competencies specific to planners. In the link below, you will see how UEP 252 - Cities in Space, Place, and Time meets these combined PAB/UEP competencies:

Style Guidelines

All written work must be consistent with the style guidelines of one of the two major style guides used at UEP - the Chicago Manual of Style (MLA) or the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (APA). Both provide clear guidelines for referencing and citing other works. You may buy either of these - they will be a useful long-term reference. The Purdue Online Writing Lab also has extremely good guidance to both styles.

Students with Disabilities

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) is a federal anti-discrimination statute that provides comprehensive civil rights protection for persons with disabilities. Among other things, this legislation requires that all students with disabilities be guaranteed a learning environment that provides for reasonable accommodation of their disabilities. If you believe you have a disability requiring an accommodation, please contact the Tufts Accessibility Services office.
