

U.S. Social Welfare (Fall 2012)

Tufts University / Urban and Environmental Policy and Planning (UEP 240)

Prof. James Jennings / james.jennings@tufts.edu / 617- 627-4625

Scheduled Time: Monday 1:30 – 4:20pm

Classroom Location: Anderson 309

The primary aim of this graduate course is to introduce students to the U.S. social welfare state and related social policies. The course readings and discussions cover basic questions about U.S. social welfare:

- What are the key characteristics of the U.S. social welfare state? And, what are some of the major debates about social policy?
- What kinds of social and demographic factors mold social welfare policies? And, in particular, how has race and gender interacted with the making and implementation of social policies?
- What kinds of social welfare initiatives have been implemented by national administrations?
- How do political institutions, political parties, and the courts influence social policies?
- What is, or should be the role of the “free market” or “privatization”, or the faith-based sector, in the production or distribution of social goods?
- What are characteristics and debates about poverty, and how should this challenge be addressed?

The course provides students with a number of ‘competencies’ adopted by UEP in 2008. In addition to an introduction to “specific policy or planning content-based knowledge related to professional interests,” competencies include an understanding of the following:

- the history, theory and processes of both policymaking and planning...with implementation...;
- the role(s) of government, governance...;
- the administrative, legal, and political aspects of policy...;
- “...relationship between the market and polis...;

The course is organized into four parts: historical context; institutional and political contexts; tools for implementation of social welfare; and an in-depth look at two specific topics: poverty and welfare reform. Students will have opportunities to explore specific social policies of interest via readings and completion of course requirements. I will use select presentations throughout the course to highlight policies in the areas of public health, social security, poverty, welfare reform, and other areas. And, assessing how these policies and related politics touch upon race and gender will reflect a discussion stream throughout the course.

Course requirements include:

1. completion of all required readings;
2. presentations based on course readings, but I will also assign short articles or news reports about developments relevant to social policy;
3. completion of written assignment (18-22 pages), will be discussed in class;
4. attendance/participation at one public forum addressing a social policy or issue, and brief presentation in class

Required readings are included in the course packet and available from Gnomon Copy. A few selections (marked with an asterisk *) will be emailed to students.

Please note: since this is a very interactive/discussion course please refrain from using pc/mac computers/ipads, etc. in this class – would greatly appreciate your cooperation.
